Director's Corner

I had the honor of hearing our Librarian of Congress, Dr. Carla Hayden, speak at the Library Journal Directors' Summit last week at the Free Library of Philadelphia. She was funny and shared how she's shaking up the LoC with her public librarian antics, like taking a pop-up exhibit of rare comic books from their collection to the D.C. Comi-con. I also heard over and over how libraries shape the narrative of their communities - that we are the last true public space - that libraries are transformational - that we bring equity and diversity - that we have to look outward and be an active part of civic life. Needless to say, I am brimming with ideas and intentions for 2018. I also toured some of the newly renovated FLP branches and networked with librarians from around the county and the country.
