Director's Corner, May 8, 2020

Hello Neighbors,

This week, I have been exploring the concept of resilience: the capacity to recover quickly from difficulties, toughness. Four ways that help me to feel resilient are to surround myself with positive people, to write, to be in nature, and to invest in myself.

I encourage you to try one of these methods to build your resilience. Perhaps, you write about this unusual time so generations after us have a first-hand account of how we lived. Or take a walk and get out into nature. I checked out Mid-Atlantic Birds, Backyard Guide from Hoopla. It has been fun to try to identify birds in my yard and neighborhood. The book also has information about creating a backyard habitat and how to start bird watching.

If you choose to concentrate on investing in yourself there is no limit these days. It is almost overwhelming how many free classes are available. If you are having trouble getting started, check out the eReading page on our website for resources and ideas.

I feel surrounded by positive people. In the face of adversity, you have been engaged with the library and encourage us to celebrate our shared humanity. We are all passionate about our community and are exploring and finding new ways to bring people together.

With fondness,

Pam

Staff Picks - Monica

Ten guests are drawn to the mysterious Soldier Island. Soon they find themselves getting methodically killed off one by one, according to an old nursery rhyme.

But who is the killer?

This thrilling murder mystery is a thought-provoking that keeps the reader on their toes and leaves them wanting more.
